

ALEXANDRIA.
TUESDAY EVENING, DECEMBER 17.

MR. INGALLS, whom the republicans in the Senate have re-elected president pro tempore of that body, wrote an apothecosis of Ossawatimie Brown not long ago and published it in the North American Review. Mr. Eli Thayer, who originated the famous Emigrant Aid Society, that sent thousands of abolitionists to Kansas and made that an anti-slavery State, whose reputation Charles Sumner envied more than he did that of General Andrew Jackson, and who was one of Brown's contemporaries, is still alive, and says that Brown, whom Mr. Ingalls would have it appear was a god, was not only a disunionist and a cold blooded assassin, but a common and notorious horse thief. Mr. Thayer, like Mr. Ingalls, is a distinguished member of the republican party. But Mr. Thayer, unlike Mr. Ingalls, is not a candidate for re-election to the U. S. Senate. The strange thing about Brown is, not that there was such a human monster, but that such a man should have professed, if not real, admirers.

THE VERDICT in the Cronin murder case only adds another to the innumerable instances that demonstrate the grotesque absurdity of the jury system in the present age, and should greatly strengthen the latent force that demands a more certain and effective means of meeting out justice to criminals. The prisoners were either guilty or not guilty of the crime of which they were charged. If guilty, they should have been sentenced to death as cold blooded, calculating, deliberate murderers; if not guilty, they should have been honorably acquitted. There was no just middle course. If the evidence did not convict, it should have acquitted them. That it did convict, is plain to most every unprejudiced, disinterested and reasonable man who read it, as published in the newspapers. Eleven of the jurors were of the same opinion, but one, as reported, had been "fixed," and he proved an effective bar to justice.

COL. DUDLEY has demonstrated to the entire satisfaction of all reasonable and unprejudiced men the fact that the present administration is, as Mr. John Wise says it is, "a humbug; swindling and pharisaical." No body knows better than Mr. Harrison that Col. Dudley did instruct certain men in Indiana, and supply them with money thereto, to buy votes in that State; and yet on his recent visit to Indiana not only did Mr. Harrison's U. S. Judge and U. S. District Attorney protect him from the State authorities, who had offered a reward for his arrest, but the former welcomed him, and the latter actually went so far as to say that the Colonel's bribery only showed a laudable interest in republican politics. Yes, Benjamin is worse than Rutherford.

THE PROTECTIONISTS say that protection, by stimulating manufactures, affords a home market for farmers' products and therefore increases the price of those products and consequently that of their lands also. Governor Lee, in his late message to the legislature, tells of the great increase that has recently taken place in the mining and manufacturing interests of Virginia; but in the same message he also says there has been a great decrease in the value of her farming lands. That the latter statement is as true as the former is too well known to all the farmers in eastern Virginia, if not in all the other portions of the State, and that it is so is a patent home refutation of the assertion that a protective tariff protects farmers.

SEVERAL BILLS to repeal the civil service law have already been introduced in the Senate, by republican as well as by democratic Senators. Such a measure is popular. The democrats should not let the republicans get ahead of them in this matter, but should push it earnestly and energetically, and force a vote on it, so as to put themselves on record in its favor. The vast majority of the intelligent and practical voters of the country know that the civil service law, as executed, is a grotesque humbug, and they will look with favor upon any party that shall compass its repeal.

UNDER the present republican regime not only are deserters, malingerers, and stragglers pensioned by the government, but men never in the army, injured while firing salutes for republican political victories, are also provided for at the expense of the people. A man has just been appointed to a place at the Capitol, in Washington, because he was hurt by the explosion of a canon fired in celebration of Mr. Harrison's election.

THE protectionists say protection increases wages. But so pronounced a protectionist as Mr. Carnegie, the great Pennsylvania iron maker, is forced to acknowledge that steel rails can be made in this country as cheaply as in England. As the cost of living here is greater than in England, what Mr. Carnegie says, which is true, proves that protection does not increase wages, for steel rails stand high on the list of protected articles.

The barn of Moses E. Dodge, at Hopkinton, N. H., was burned yesterday morning. The bodies of Mr. Dodge and Alphonso Paige were found in the ruins. Mr. Paige was on a protracted spree, and it is thought he set the fire and then committed suicide, as his throat was cut. Mr. Dodge was suffocated, probably in trying to save his cattle.

EDITORIAL BREVITIES.

Queen Victoria is still leading in the cattle business, not only carrying off prizes, but turning an honest penny by selling her prize shorthorns at 37½ cents per lb., almost as much as is charged here for tenderloin steak.

John G. Whittier, the poet, is 83 years old to-day. In spite of his advanced age he is in excellent health. He accomplishes almost as much now as in earlier days, although his failing sight makes it difficult for him to write without frequent pauses.

An Illinois cattle dealer recently shipped about 400 head of cattle, specially fattened for the Christmas market in London. Upon the arrival of the steamer 189 of the cattle were found to have died of suffocation, involving a loss of $25,000. It was enough to make the shipper say bad words, which it is said he did.

The influenza epidemic has spread all over Europe. Commencing with the Czar of all the Russias it has raged with impartiality in place and novel alike. The little King of Spain is sneezing and at St. Petersburg Grand Dukes, British, German, Turkish, Chinese and Persian Ambassadors are all blowing their noses and wiping their eyes in fact the hay-fever is raging and many there be hereabouts who can sympathize.

Dr. Talmage of the Brooklyn Tabernacle is having a pleasant time in the east, in interviewing the Prime Minister of Greece, the Queen of Greece, and the Empress Victoria, who has been visiting Athens. More than this he has shipped a part of Mars Hill to Brooklyn for a corner stone of his new Tabernacle, and has preached a sermon from Mars Hill, standing on the same spot from which St. Paul is supposed to have addressed the Athenians.

A writer in a New York paper, on the "devious ways of fair women," thus opens his article: "In these days of the latter renaissance, when ladies are dressing their tresses after the fashion of Athenian belles in the time of Solon, hairpins and ornaments are as important and artistic creations as when the lame god Hephaestus wrought them in his mystic workshop in the heart of volcanic Lemnos, and when the perverse Penelope's suitors deemed them worthy of feelings with which to inspire her chaste regard." How's that for a prologue on fashion?

A cool head and courageous heart are enviable traits, and Miss Betty Emmons, living near Birmingham Ala., possesses both, for last Saturday, while walking along on the Georgia Pacific Railroad, she discovered that the spikes had been drawn and a rail moved. Hearing the roar of an approaching passenger train, she did not hesitate an instant, but tearing off a red flannel petticoat, she ran toward the approaching train, waving the garment across the track which the engineer seeing stopped the train. It is useless to add that the passengers handsomely rewarded the brave girl.

FROM WASHINGTON.

(Special Correspondence of the ALEXANDRIA GAZETTE.)
WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 17, 1888.
Several democratic members of the House are now talking about not voting on any proposition requiring the government to make good the devaluation of silver, the cashier of the late Sergeant-at-Arms of the House, until a legal decision has been rendered upon the question. Mr. Mills, of Texas says the best thing Mr. Leedom, the ex-Sergeant at arms, can do for himself and the democratic party, is for him or his friends to make good the deficit, and leave the rest to the justice, equity and wisdom of Congress.

Senator George of Mississippi, one of the party who went from the Davis memorial services in Alexandria last Friday night, says the demonstration was most gratifying to him as a native and representative of Mr. Davis's State in the U. S. Senate, and was so to every other citizen of his State. He says he always thought Virginians were the best people on the face of the earth, and that what he saw and heard on the night referred to was as much an honor to Mississippi as it was to Virginia. Senator Reagan talks in the same way, and so does General Wheeler, another of the party and Congressmen Lee, Wise and Tucker, who were also in the party, say they were very much gratified, and that they talked with all the rest, and that what every one said was to the same effect.

It is reported that Gen. Longstreet, notwithstanding his numerous unsuccessful attempts to obtain office under the present administration, is making another one, and that now he is being pushed by certain southern republicans for the place filled by Gen. Rosecrans, Register of the Treasury, once filled by the colored barber Eugene.

That the only two republicans in Congressmen from Virginia have pretty hard lines now, is proved by the fact that one of them, Mr. Browne, told his feet were blistered from walking to the departments, navy yard and government printing office, trying to get places filled by the people from his State.

The following Virginia postoffice news is current here to-day: The names of Pritchard and Lee have gone from the Postoffice Department to the White House, the former for the postoffice at Front Royal and the latter for that at Berryville. Both are recommended by Mr. Mahone. It is also said that Capt. Griffith will be appointed to the postoffice at Winchester. He also has the same recommendation. Neither he nor Lee was an original Mahone man, but they both were active workers for him in his last campaign. The special agent sent to Danville to inquire about the several applicants for the postoffice there has returned, but it is not known what will be done in that case, as Gen. Mahone has as yet recommended none of them, and his recommendation remains potential at the Postoffice Department. J. W. Porter, of Albemarle county, the great silver currency man, one of the "kickers" who flapped just before the recent election, is here as an applicant for the Charlottesville office, for which A. M. Lawson, another flapping "kicker," is also an applicant. Mrs. Gen. Long has held the office for many years.

The session of the House was very short to-day. So many members had bills to introduce that about one fourth of them were on their feet at the same time, and created such a great clamor by their efforts to attract the Speaker's attention, that as the easiest and best means by which to stop the fuss, somebody on the democratic side moved an adjournment, and the Speaker, agreeing, decided the motion carried.

The Senate Committee on Education at their meeting this morning agreed unanimously to report favorably upon the Blair bill. The democrats present were Senators George, Pugh, Barbour and Payne. One of the republicans, Senator Washburn, reserved the right to vote as he may please when the bill shall come up on its passage in the Senate.

By the new organization of the Senate committees, Mr. Barbour is a member of the following committees: District of Columbia, Education and Labor, Interstate Commerce, Pensions, Penitentiaries, and Mr. Daniel, of the committees on Public Buildings and Grounds, Indian Affairs, Revision of the Laws, and Quadricentennial.

The Senate, in executive session yesterday, considered a proposition to move the U. S. Supreme Court and the offices thereof to the Butler building, to which building will also be moved the Judiciary Department.

It has been determined at the Internal Revenue Bureau to consolidate the offices of storekeeper and gauger in the internal revenue service, and thereby to make a great saving in the salary account.

General Lee says the stenographer who reported his speech at the Davis memorial services in Alexandria last Friday night made one mistake, reporting him as saying that monuments scarcely survive over twenty years, when the word he uttered was centuries.

Col. Hatch, a member of the House from Missouri, who was the Confederate commissioner for the exchange of prisoners during the war, in reference to the old republican leaders which have been revived by the death of Mr. Davis, respecting the treatment of federal prisoners in the South, says that not only at Andersonville, but before the prisoners were taken there from Belle Isle, the inability of the Confederate government to supply them with proper food and medicine was officially reported to the U. S. authorities, and that upon one occasion he sent a letter to the U. S. authorities asking them to name their own terms for the exchange of prisoners and making a plain statement of the sufferings and privations to which those prisoners were subjected by reason of the straitened circumstances of the Confederacy, which was highly appreciated by the U. S. troops. To this letter, he says, he received no response. The Confederate States, he says, were always not only willing but extremely so to do for the exchange of prisoners, but the United States never were.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

Friends of Mr. Gowen think fear of parties caused his suicide.

Assistant District Attorney Shillington, of Washington, has resigned.

Work on the Nicaragua canal has been suspended for the present.

Secretary Blaine has cabled the President his congratulations to Stanley.

The influenza, which is raging throughout Europe, has broken out in New York.

Dr. Seth Pancost, a noted homeopathist, died in New York yesterday, aged sixty-six years.

The House democratic caucus to take action on the Silcott defalcation was abandoned.

It is estimated that there are now 12,213,430 whites and 7,270,720 blacks in the southern States.

The new bridge extending Pennsylvania avenue, Washington, across the Eastern Branch has been completed.

Five men were thrown from a scaffold at Benwood, W. Va., yesterday a distance of fifty feet, and seriously injured.

The Senate yesterday by a vote of 47 to 12, adopted a concurrent resolution to take a recess from December 19 to January 6.

A ruling by Speaker Reed yesterday, it is thought, may enable the republican majority in the House to deal summarily with contested election cases.

A 16-year-old son of Henry Potts, of Woodstock, Md., yesterday accidentally discharged a shotgun, killing his young sister and seriously wounding his mother.

The Easter hardware manufacturing company of Cincinnati will remove its plant to E. Payne, Ala. The company has a capital stock of $400,000 and will employ 700 hands.

An order has been issued by the provisional Government of Brazil compelling all the rubber houses in Para to pay to the Government for the credit of the Companhia Mercantil—a small local company in Para—twenty reals, or three-eighths of a cent, for every kilogramme of rubber exported. Monopolies follow in the wake of republicanism.

A party of Polish workmen walking home yesterday evening on the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad, near Wilkes-Barre, were struck by a passenger train coming around a curve. One of the party was thrown aside and escaped with bad bruises, three men were killed outright and were horribly mangled, and another was so badly injured that he cannot recover.

Letter from Richmond.

(Correspondence of the ALEXANDRIA GAZETTE.)
RICHMOND, Va., Dec. 16.—Mr. and Mrs. Davidson, of Fairfax, were among the visitors at the Capitol to-day. They are on their way home from Florida, where they went on a bridal trip. Mrs. Davidson is a daughter of the late Major John H. Chichester, of Fairfax.

Among those who are asking the General Assembly to remove their political disabilities are F. B. Shield and Overton Howard, of Richmond, and T. Spicer Curlett, of Lancaster.

Delegate Dupuy, of Prince Edward, who offered the bill prohibiting the sale in the State of meats slaughtered more than 24 hours, is catching it on all sides. The object of the bill is to give a black eye to western meats, and the heaviest blow seemed to be aimed at Mr. Armour, of Chicago, who has been interfering to a considerable extent with the Virginia cattle market. This is not Mr. Dupuy's pet hobby. On the contrary, he is, I am informed, busy carrying out the wish expressed in a resolution adopted by the Farmers' Assembly.

The introduction of a bill to-day by Senator Roberts to appropriate $80,000 for the enlargement and improvement of the lunatic asylum at Marion, in south-west Virginia, will suggest similar bills relating to the other lunatic asylums. It is a well known fact there is not at present enough room at the asylums for the accommodation of the insane, and that something will be done during this session of the legislature to care for the unfortunate lunatics who are kept in jail, not being able to gain admission to the asylums. As Senator Roberts is the first in the field with a bill asking for an appropriation, it may be that the asylum in the south-west will be enlarged to meet all the requirements of the times.

Speaking of lunatic asylums brings to mind the resolution introduced to-day by Senator Heaton, of Loudoun, requiring an itemized account of all the expenditures at all the asylums in the State. Mr. Heaton tried to get such a resolution adopted at the last session, but failed. This time he succeeded, and the heads of departments of State institutions will doubtless be little more particular hereafter in making their purchases.

T. SPICER CURETT.—The House of Delegates yesterday ordered its engrossment a bill removing the political disabilities of Mr. T. Spicer Curlett, of Lancaster county, acquired under the anti-dueling act. Speaker R. H. Caldwell in explaining the bill said that Mr. Curlett had challenged an older gentleman to meet him in mortal combat on the dueling field. On reaching the spot selected for the combat the duelists agreed to settle their differences by a flat and acid contest, and, said Mr. Caldwell, "no blood was spilled." At this time of the occurrence Mr. Curlett was the Commonwealth's attorney for Lancaster county.

Randolph, Fitzhugh Lee, Thomas J. Kirkpatrick, L. M. Blackford, Rev. T. M. Carson and others. The asylum will be located about a mile from Lynchburg, and under the auspices of the Episcopal Church.

A northern business house has proposed to the vestry of St. Paul's church, Richmond, in which Mr. Davis worshipped while President of the Confederacy, to place a thousand-dollar memorial window in the church free of charge in honor of Gen. Robert E. Lee and Mr. Davis. The vestry did not accept, they having decided to order the windows from Munich and to have them as popular memorials. It is stated that a lady has offered to furnish the one to Lee, and that it has been accepted.

The Cronin Murderers.

When it was known yesterday that the jury in the Cronin murder case, in Chicago, had agreed upon a verdict, precautions were taken that no one but representatives of the press and counsel engaged in the case should be given admittance. As soon as Judge McConnell took his seat upon the bench, the five prisoners were ushered in from the jail. Lawyer John F. Beggs, with a deadly pallor on his face, headed the line. Behind him came Coughlin, with a smile upon his face. It was apparent to every observer that he had nerved himself for the ordeal. Next came O'Sullivan, his jaws compressed and the fingers of his right hand clapping nervously at his mustache. Martin Burke, close behind him, had the same look of stolid indifference that he had worn throughout the trial. Kunz, the last in line, smiled and waved his hands as he entered the room.

As soon as the prisoners had taken their seats three deputy sheriffs took up a position behind each chair and at the same moment about fifty officers formed a barricade between the prisoners' row and all means of exit. The jury then filed into the room and the roll was called. In response to the question of the clerk of the court as to whether he and his colleagues had agreed on a verdict, Foreman Clarke answered, "We have" at the same time handing a folded paper to the clerk. In another moment the voice of the clerk, clear and distinct, rang out on the air:

"We find the defendant, John F. Beggs, not guilty as charged in the indictment."

There was a buzz in the court room while the blood rushed to the face of the prisoner, and in a second it was of a carmine hue, and his entire frame shook like that of a man afflicted with the palsy. Again the voice of the clerk rang out:

"We find the defendant, John Kunz, guilty of manslaughter, and fix his penalty at three years in the penitentiary."

The little comedian simply smiled and showed his teeth. To all appearances the verdict at the moment suited him as well as an acquittal.

There was a pause before the clerk resumed. The eyes of Coughlin, Burke and O'Sullivan were riveted on the reader, while each man was making a superhuman effort to control his feelings. For the third time the clerk cleared his throat and proceeded:

"We find the prisoners, Daniel Coughlin, Martin Burke, and Patrick O'Sullivan, guilty of murder, as charged in the indictment, and fix their punishment at imprisonment in the penitentiary for the term of their natural lives."

The suspense of the auditors found vent in a half suppressed shout, and the demeanor of the three men passed unnoted. Over 2,000 people were congregated on the outside of the jail, and the verdict was received with satisfaction by the large majority.

Attorney Forrest, in behalf of Coughlin, Burke, O'Sullivan, and Kunz, immediately lay made a motion for a new trial.

A MATRIMONIAL SENSATION.—A sensation has been created in Danville, Va., by the marriage of Mr. M. H. Anderson, of Atlanta, Ga., and Miss Mary R. McCormick, of Danville. It was announced that Mr. Anderson and Miss McCormick were married. Cards were sent for the marriage of Miss McCormick to Mr. A. B. Carter, of Richmond, Ind. Extensive preparations were being made for the wedding to-morrow. Mr. Anderson and Miss McCormick had long been lovers, but Mr. Carter was the choice of the parents. The young lady finally succumbed to parental influence and agreed to marry Carter to-morrow, but on Sunday Anderson suddenly appeared and the upshot of the whole business is that he and Miss McCormick were married at 7 o'clock at night and left for Atlanta. Mr. Carter was expected yesterday to find himself left.

A DEPUTED BOUNDARY.—Attorney Gen'l Ayers, yesterday made a motion in the U. S. Supreme Court asking leave on behalf of the State of Virginia, to file a bill of equity against the State of Tennessee, to settle the boundary dispute between the two States. It is asserted in the motion that Tennessee unlawfully claims jurisdiction over a stretch of land, from two to eight miles in width, extending from the northern border of North Carolina to the border line of Kentucky. The town of Bristol is one of the places situated within the disputed territory.

That fat man in Washington, used to be an invalid, but he took to hard drinking, not of whiskey, but Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup, and now he walks right over the very slenderest dudes, and don't care at all.
